Detailed Action

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

- The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. §103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:
  - (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.
- 2. Claims 1-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Woods et. al. (Woods) Wired for Speed: Efficient Routes on VRML 2.0.

Regarding claims 8 and 1. Woods teaches features of invention substantially as claimed; Woods teaches a system/method supporting communicating command information between a world creator (server or content creator) and a player VRML browser (client) in an interactive communication system (introduction-section), comprising: means for generating (firing) a command message (command route) associated with a user action or system event associated with streams containing scene description information (e.g. scene source nodes, etc.), command message including a command (e.g. event fields, see sections 1.1-2.2, command routes, section 4.1 commands, i.e. execute fields), a command descriptor (integer identifier, see section 4.1), and one of a server route (command routes-rendering scene means, section 2.2-2.3) and a command node (execute event sink field i.e. command route node, see 2.1 and 4.1); and transmitting the command message upon occurrence of a user or system triggering event (e.g. Touchsensor, Timesensor, etc., see 2.1 section, user or system events, see 2.2, source/sink route, user or system triggering event), however Woods does not explicitly teaches a server; Woods teaches a "world content creator" (content provider) interacting with said client (browser) supporting interactive communication, as discussed above; It would have been obvious to one ordinary skilled in the art at the time the invention was made to utilize Woods teachings to implement the server entity Application/Control Number: 09/240,509 (YONEDA et. al.)

providing the same functionalities as claimed, motivation would be to provide a robust designing got efficient handling of network routes and events, as taught by Woods.

Regarding claims 2-3, however Woods does not explicitly teach wherein said the generating command message, discussed above is consistent with local interactivity model defined in MPEG-4. Admittance of prior art (MPEP § 2129) Applicant disclosure states: "MPEP-4 essentially uses two modes of interactivity: local and remote. Local interactivity can be fully implemented using the native event architecture of MPEG-4 interactivity can be fully implemented using the native event architecture of MPEG-4 BIFS (Binary Format for Scenes), which is based on the VRML 2.0 ROUTEs design and documented in Part 1 of the MPEG-4 specification (Systems), see page 1, lines 26-33. It would have been obvious to one ordinary skilled in the art at the time the invention was made to utilize an interactivity model defined in MPEG-4, the new VRML 2.0 specification, enables much more dynamic and interactive environments supported by the convergence of these technologies; motivation would be to provide via MPEG-4 a real service on desktop application enhancing the tele-presence and shared virtual reality space technology (see Ref A).

Regarding claims 4-5. The method in accordance with claim 1, wherein the triggering event is a mouse click and wherein the triggering event is a timer signal (Woods, see 2.1 section).

Regarding claims 6-7. The method in accordance with claim 1, wherein command information is transmitted from the server to the client and wherein command information is transmitted from the client to the server (Woods, message between a world creator (server or content creator) and a player VRML browser (client), request/response, see 2.1-2.3, request e.g. change state of current scene, response update and rendering requested scene)

Regarding claims 9-14, the claim comprise the system in accordance to the method disclosed on claims 1-7, respectively same rationale is applicable.
